Troops Move In To Halt a Battle in Belfast Street

Meteorite Hits Moon, Aiding U.S. Research

Impact Recorded at 3 Apollo Stations

HOUSTON, May 14 (AP)—A meteorite slammed into the moon yesterday, and the impact, close to the Apollo-14 landing site, provided scientists with their biggest bonus since the moon's first explorations began nearly 10 years ago.

The impact was the first such meteorite to be recorded by any of the four "listening posts" planted on the moon by Apollo 14.

Latham, a seismologist at the University of California, said the impact, which occurred at 10:00 a.m. EDT, was a "small" event.

The impact was recorded by the most distant seismometer, that of Apollo-15 at the Hadley site some 600 miles away.

Latham said data from the impact should provide new information on the structure of the moon's deep interior.

117 Japanese Perish in Cabaret Fire Trap

OSAKA, Japan, May 13 (AP)—It started as a Saturday night of fun for about 170 hostesses and customers in the Play Town Cabaret. It ended with most of them dead.

Fire on a lower floor trapped the crowd in the seventh-floor cabaret and, even though the flames never touched the cabaret itself, the death toll was 117, officials said.

Kelly's Bar, frequented mainly by Catholics, was jammed when the bomb exploded. Crowds gathered outside, came under fire from hidden gunmen, apparently in the Springmartin area.

Catholics were incensed by the attack, accusing Protestants of staging an ambush with the aim of bringing rioters under fire.

Troops said police sealed off the main highway out of this capital city after the biggest outbreak of violence since Northern Ireland's notorious "Bloody Sunday" in January.

Eight miles of the M-1 highway linking Belfast with Dublin was closed. Troops diverted traffic away from the trouble area as stone-throwing switched to deadly gunfire.

Youth's Body Found The body of another young man, riddled with bullets, was found today in the Protestant Shankill Road area.

The deaths yesterday and today brought the number of victims to 327 in nearly three years of strife in Northern Ireland.

The six killed yesterday represented the highest toll in one day since 13 civilians were shot dead on Jan. 30 in clashes between civil rights demonstrators and British paratroopers in Londonderry, the province's second city.

Yesterday, an army spokesman said, a car driven by two youths stopped outside Kelly's Bar. The youths went into the crowded bar and came out shortly afterward.

They walked back to the car and then turned around again. At that moment, the bomb, which was inside the car, went off.

Catholic residents of the area attributed the blast and the subsequent deaths to the Protestant youths.

U.S. Jets Blast Bridge On Key Route to DMZ

Vital Link Withstood Many Raids

From Wire Dispatches

SAIGON, May 14.—U.S. Phantom jets, using what were described as "phenomenally accurate" guided bombs, have cut one of North Vietnam's most important road and rail bridges in a blow at Hanoi's supplies for its southern offensive, the U.S. command announced today.

The bombs hit the western span of the bridge at Thanh Hoa, 80 miles southeast of Hanoi, sending it tumbling into the Song Ma River.

The raid was staged yesterday, three days after U.S. mines became operative in North Vietnam's main ports. All major rail and road traffic toward the Demilitarized Zone would normally pass over the bridge.

Dragon's Jaw Bridge The span is known as the Dragon's Jaw Bridge. The U.S. Seventh Air Force said the bridge had stood for seven years, despite repeated air attacks, as "a symbol of invincibility and a challenge to U.S. pilots."

Officials also reported that North Vietnamese rail links with China had been cut in places and that key railroad bridges on the edge of Hanoi had been wrecked by air strikes.

Two U.S. aircraft were shot down over Thanh Hoa yesterday, Hanoi radio reported today, but U.S. officials denied that any were lost in the raid on the Dragon's Jaw Bridge.

MIG Reported Downed

In a delayed report, the U.S. command said that four Air Force Phantoms intercepted four MIG-19s Friday while escorting bombers on raids in the vicinity of the Yen Bai Airfield, 50 miles northwest of Hanoi. The command said one of the MIGs was downed. All of the U.S. aircraft returned safely to their bases.

The South Vietnamese, for a change, did well in winding up a raid by their marines into enemy-held Quang Tri Province. One thousand marines marched out of enemy territory almost unscathed after inflicting sizeable casualties on the surprised Northerners.

Landed in U.S. Copters That the marines did not attempt to stay in Quang Tri Province, where they landed in U.S. helicopters Friday, was a measure of professionalism and wisdom, some observers thought. They had evidently struck and gone before the North Vietnamese could effectively react.

Their withdrawal, however, made the raid symbolic and disruptive but not a reversal of the military gains made by the North Vietnamese since the offensive began March 30.

The 36-hour raid centered on Hai Lang, five miles north of My Chan, and near the lost provincial capital of Quang Tri. The South Vietnamese Marines freed a number of civilians, then swept southward on foot back to My Chan, encountering little resistance.

Officers claimed that 280 North Vietnamese troops were killed in the raid and that it had crippled the 68th Regiment of the North (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

Washington Officials Suggest Russia Aims to Test Blockade

WASHINGTON, May 14 (NYT).—A number of developments left it unclear yesterday whether the Soviet Union had decided to test the sealing off of North Vietnam's harbors by the United States or whether, in fact, the Russians and Americans had reached an agreement on allowing the passage of supplies to the North.

The Moscow broadcast said that the freighters were heading for Haiphong unless it was planning some kind of test of the isolation of North Vietnam.

Israel Says Red Cross Knew Jackers Might Be Attacked

USALERS, May 14 (Reuters).—Israel said last night it explained to the International Red Cross that it would military action, despite the fact that it was involved, if there was no way to save the 97 captives of Sabena airliner hijacked last week by Palestinian guerrillas.

Foreign Ministry statement said: "The International Red Cross representatives were to come to the airport on request of the Red Cross, and not the initiative of the Red Cross."

Bomb Throwers Beat Deadline

TOKYO, May 14 (Reuters).—Twenty-eight policemen were injured yesterday as leftist students threw gasoline bombs just before a tough new law against their use and manufacture came into effect.

Police arrested 125 students who hurled more than 100 Molotov cocktails in a main street, burning a police sentry box and three private cars.

The law, which came into force today, imposes prison terms up to seven years for endangering life and property by using gasoline bombs.

The bomb throwers were protesting the terms of the Okinawa reversion treaty.

Sadat Lashes Out at Critics Of Relations With Moscow

CAIRO, May 14 (Reuters).—President Anwar Sadat of Egypt today lashed out against critics of his policy of closer ties with the Soviet Union. He said his close ties with the Soviet Union were being attacked by "a small group of people."

In a frank speech that revealed new details of domestic criticism of Soviet influence in Egypt, the president warned his local critics: "Anybody who attempts to attack the people's working forces will expose themselves to punishment, a firm punishment. I shall not tolerate this."

The president disclosed that he had received a petition attacking the Soviet Union from members of the former Egyptian revolutionary junta.

Speaking to applause from a packed national assembly, President Sadat declared, "I shall distribute the petition to you. We fear nothing. Let them come to you and discuss with you what they have. Let everything be in clear daylight, because light frightens bats."

Strong Terms The Egyptian leader again denounced the United States in strong terms.

"Let me tell you frankly, I cut off all relations with America in October and November because of their deceit and cheating and lies and because they withdrew their pledges," he said.

President Sadat added: "There is no point in talking to the Americans because they are even more Israel than the Israelis themselves."

He spoke at length about Egypt's relations with the Soviet Union and charged again that the United States and Israel were trying to cause discord between Cairo and Moscow.

Court Hears Appeal

3 British Rail Unions Order Workers to End Slowdowns

LONDON, May 14 (UPI)—Britain's three railway unions today ordered their 250,000 members to end a three-day nationwide slowdown immediately in compliance with a government-requested court order.

The move came after an appeals court held an unprecedented Sunday sitting to hear union arguments against the order, the government's second attempt in three weeks to curb labor trouble on the rails.

"With possible contempt of court proceedings over our heads, it is important to make every effort to comply as soon as possible," said Morris Finer, representing one of the unions.

He referred to a National Industrial Relations Court ruling last night calling for a secret ballot of railmen to determine whether they wanted to accept a management pay offer rejected by union leaders.

The unions immediately appealed. The appeal was expected to last about three days—but the order took effect at once.

Britain, meanwhile, spent the weekend without trains. The Railways Board canceled all service until 6 a.m. Monday due to shortage of personnel.

Union spokesmen said that telegrams went out tonight to railmen urging them to return to normal work "forthwith." But they said that it would be evening before service returned to "anything like normal."

The Industrial Relations Court was set up under an act passed last year to give the government new power to thwart labor action. It ruled after a government appeal for a ballot.

Railwaymen began the slowdown, their second in three weeks, Friday. The government ended the first with an order from the Industrial Relations Court for a 14-day "cooling-off" period.

1st Sunday Sitting
Today's Sunday sitting of the Appeals Court was the first in British legal history. "This is an historic occasion," Mr. Finer said at the session. "One's first reaction is to hope history does not repeat itself."

The Appeals Court is scheduled to meet again at 9 a.m. tomorrow to continue its hearing on the union's appeal against the back-to-work order.

Mr. Finer, the lawyer for one of the unions, said that the cooling-off period did not produce the talks it should have on the wage dispute.

"During the past 14 days, our case is that virtually nothing was done either from the employer's side or from the government's side to engage—as we were willing to do—in a useful discussion," he said.

Proposed Ballot
The lawyer also denounced the phrasing of the proposed ballot, with its one question: "In the light of the pay offer, do you wish to take part in further industrial action?"

British Rail has offered a £30.50 weekly minimum wage guarantee from May 1 and a 12.5 percent pay increase as of June 5. The unions demand that both the minimum and the increase be backdated to May 1.

Lowest-paid rail workers now earn a basic wage of £17.50 weekly, but many express train engineers earn as much as £60 a week.

on the third floor, where the fire broke out, they escaped.

Police said the cause of the fire still was being investigated. Witnesses said the building, which housed a department store, was enveloped by flames in seconds. At every seventh floor window hostesses waved flashlight beams and customers waved white shirts.

As some began to jump or fall, some of the 10,000 spectators who gathered in the midtown district of bright neon lights shouted: "Hold out longer!"

Leaders were extended to the top floor and some hostesses in colorful dresses blackened by smoke were brought down.

Home Affairs Minister Motomasa Tokai, who inspected the scene after the nine-hour fire had destroyed the building's second, third and fourth floors, said employees of the cabaret had not been trained in using emergency equipment. He said rather than guiding customers to safety they tried to escape.

Used Rope to Escape
"Guests and hostesses somehow made their way to a window," said Keiko Maekawa, 30, another hostess. "I was pushed to the forefront. I had to hang onto a very hot piece of rope to escape."

She was one who made it through the emergency chute. Spectator Kenzo Tsuda said he saw only three or four persons escape that way.

Katsuko Kanagawa, a woman employee of the cabaret, said from her hospital bed: "After the fire broke out, everyone was shouting, 'Escape!' I don't remember thinking of anything but escape. There was a lot of smoke, choking everybody."

Another finding in the Harris poll was that if the resignation of President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam was necessary for peace, 60 percent would favor it, with 14 percent opposed.

Nixon Is Said To Bar 1972 Tax Reforms

By Robert B. Semple Jr.

WASHINGTON, May 14 (UPI)—A senior White House official said yesterday that the administration would not propose any major tax reforms in the individual and corporate income tax structure this year. But he added that President Nixon, if re-elected, would ask for such reforms during his second term of office.

In a briefing for newsmen at the White House, John D. Ehrlichman, the President's principal assistant for domestic affairs, said that Mr. Nixon had decided that "it was not in the national interest nor was it in the interest of the average taxpayer to attempt to consider and adopt major changes in the Internal Revenue Code" in the election year.

Mr. Ehrlichman also criticized contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination for circulating what he called "a number of phony tax facts" in the primary campaigns—an apparent reference to charges by some candidates, in particular Sen. George McGovern, D., S.D., that taxes on middle-income taxpayers are too burdensome while those of the rich and business are too light.

To some observers here, Mr. Ehrlichman's very appearance to state the administration's opposition to tax reform now was as important and suggestive as what he said.

His appearance before newsmen represented the first time that Mr. Nixon has lent the prestige of his office to the administration's attempt to counter the growing cry for immediate tax reform.

It also reflected a widespread belief within the President's senior staff that the administration had not explained its case against tax reform with sufficient force or clarity, as well as a fear among his political advisers that the Democrats might continue to reap political profit by calling for action on tax reform unless the White House could make a convincing case for inaction.

To this end, Mr. Ehrlichman emphasized three points: one, that the tax structure is an immensely complicated mechanism and, therefore, any changes in it should be made only after the kind of careful and deliberate debate which Congress might find impossible to sustain in an election year.

Two, that any major reforms should await the final statistical results of the 1969 Tax Reform Act and other tax changes in the last three years. Mr. Ehrlichman said these changes had increased taxes on corporations by an aggregate of $4.9 billion while decreasing individual income taxes, mainly in the middle and lower brackets, by an aggregate of $18.9 billion.

Three, that tax reform should be accompanied by a careful examination, and perhaps repeal, of some tax provisions which he called "unproductive, no-payoff federal spending programs we now have on the books." The point of this measure would be to insure that federal tax dollars yield the benefits they are intended to produce.

Pyongyang—Imposing North Korean Capital

By Harrison E. Salisbury

PYONGYANG, North Korea, May 14 (UPI)—The last time an American correspondent saw Pyongyang the city was a shell-shattered ruin and the United States Army was heading south in something close to a rout under the Korean-Chinese offensive that had rolled down from the Yalu River in the late autumn of 1950.

Not since those grim days of the Korean war had American newsmen glimpsed the North Korean capital until yesterday when, in bright May sunshine with pink azaleas and yellow primroses blazing in the Pyongyang parks, two New York Times correspondents, this writer and John M. Lee, the Tokyo bureau

Abortion Law Repeal Vetoes By Rockefeller

ALBANY, May 14 (UPI)—In a strong denunciation of the "personal vilification and political coercion" that surrounded the issue, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller vetoed the Legislature's repeal of the state's liberalized abortion law.

The governor's action Saturday meant that the current abortion law, passed in 1970, which permits a woman to have an abortion on demand until the 24th week of pregnancy, remains intact at least until next year.

In denouncing the bill that would have abolished the current law and restored the state's previous abortion statute allowing an abortion only when a mother's life was jeopardized, Gov. Rockefeller said: "I can see no justification now for repealing this reform and thus condemning hundreds of thousands of women to the dark age once again."

The Legislature, which adjourned Friday night, was under heavy election-year pressure from the Roman Catholic Church and various "right to life" groups around the state to abolish the present law.

Those who favored revocation of the current law received a boost last week when the archbishop of New York released a letter President Nixon sent Torrence Cardinal Cooke in which the President allied himself with opponents of the liberalized state law.

Nixon Birthplace In Bomb Hoax

YORBA LINDA, Calif., May 14 (UPI)—A bomb hoax last week caused a hurried evacuation of the house where President Nixon was born. While anti-war demonstrations shouted slogans outside, a Viet Cong flag was run up a flagpole on the lawn.

The occupants of the small frame dwelling on the grounds of the Richard M. Nixon Elementary School here, Vincent Ellingson, 32, his wife Dolores and their three children, left hurriedly after two young men appeared at the door Tuesday afternoon and told them:

"We have been sent to tell you that you have an hour to get out before this place is blown up."

Abduction of Pets Rises in U.S., They're Sold to Labs, Ransomed

NEW YORK, May 14 (AP)—The theft of dogs and other pet animals is a growing and lucrative racket that now attracts drug addicts who want to make money to buy narcotics. A report of the National Catholic Society of Animal Welfare estimated that more than 500,000 pets are stolen or fraudulently acquired in the United States each year and that the total is probably increasing by 25 percent annually.

"There's an insatiable appetite for animals to be used for scientific research," said Gretchen Wyler, the actress who is a board member of the century-old American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

There have been reports that dogs are often stolen for ransom, with the thieves waiting for the owner to advertise for return. Narcotics addicts often grab dogs for quick cash sales, especially in New York.

It is estimated that Americans now own 25 million dogs, almost four times as many as in 1950.

A growing number of owners tattoo their Social Security numbers on pets to facilitate return if they are merely lost.

Newly Formed Government Vetoed by Turkish President

ANKARA, May 14 (UPI)—The Turkish political crisis took a surprising turn last night when President Cevdet Sunay took the unprecedented step of vetoing a 24-man government elected together by Suat Hayri Ugru, the man he selected as premier on April 29.

"The whole thing is a mystery," said Ferruh Bozbeyli, leader of the Democratic party. "I don't know what happened."

Other political leaders agreed. They said someone should form a new government quickly but said they had no idea who could succeed in putting one together that would satisfy the military commanders.

Many politicians said the Ugru government, composed of men from six major parties plus some independents, could not have survived anyway.

"It could have been chaos," one said. "The president, by forestalling such an eventuality, may have checked another military communique—which this time could have gone further than a warning to civilian politicians."

He referred to a communique issued by military commanders 14 months ago which ordered Premier Suleyman Demirel to quit under the threat of a coup.

Mr. Demirel quickly resigned and was succeeded by Nihat Erim, who quit last month after 13 months in office, his administration beset by terrorism and social, political and economic unrest.

Mr. Erim pleaded exhaustion. President Sunay turned to Mr. Ugru, who announced yesterday that he had succeeded in forming Turkey's 39th government since it became a republic in 1920.

A few hours later President Sunay rejected the government and said it was not suitable in the view of military commanders. Political sources said Mr. Sunay apparently vetoed the Ugru cabinet on the ground it was too leftist or contained too many men loyal to Mr. Demirel.

Mr. Sunay did not indicate what action he would take now, but political sources said he probably would not move quickly in asking someone else to try to put together a government.

At the moment, the government is in the hands of Acting Premier Ferit Melen.

Because of the threat of violence, Ankara is under a curfew and armed forces remain on alert status throughout the country. Moreover, politicians are barred from political activity at the insistence of the military.

Socialist Succeeds Innom
ANKARA, May 14 (AP)—Democratic Socialism gained a foothold in Turkey today as Bulent Ecevit, former journalist and labor minister, became chairman of the Republican People's party, Turkey's oldest.

To wildly cheering supporters who showered him with flowers after his election in a sports arena here, Mr. Ecevit, 47, promised his democratic Socialist program will not be Marxist and "will not open the door to the extreme left, to Communism."

Mr. Ecevit replaces Ismet Inonu, 87, who resigned after 34 years as party chairman last Monday, ending a career in which he served as president or premier for 27 of the 49 years of the Turkish Republic.

Mr. Inonu, saying the party "cannot be Socialist," quit after being successfully defied by Mr. Ecevit at a party convention.

Mr. Ecevit said he could never take Mr. Inonu's place. The delegates cheered when Mr. Ecevit said, "It is our sincere wish that we will be able to receive inspiration from that great person, his experience and superior qualities."

Mr. Ecevit told the convention the Republican party will be "reformist" and bring a system to "end exploitation and poverty."

Dan Blocker, 43, Actor; Played in 'Bonanza' on TV

INGLEWOOD, Calif., May 14 (UPI)—Dan Blocker, 43, the 260-pound actor who played Hoss Cartwright in the "Bonanza" television series, died yesterday.

Mr. Blocker, known for his good-naturedness off the screen as well as on, died at Daniel Freeman Hospital of pulmonary embolism, a respiratory condition involving a blood clot.

Mr. Blocker underwent gall bladder surgery May 1. A hospital spokesman said the actor was admitted from his home early yesterday and died in the afternoon.

A native of Bowie County, Texas, Mr. Blocker was one of the mainstays of the television series, playing the elder son whose shy attempts at romance and heavy-handedness when the family was threatened often served as the plot for the show.

He spent much of his free time with his wife, two sons and twin daughters in their San Fernando Valley home a few miles from the "Bonanza" studios.

A spokesman for NBC-TV, which carries the 14-year-old series, said shooting was scheduled to get under way this month for next season's production.

Postgraduate Work

Mr. Blocker came to Los Angeles in 1956 for postgraduate work at UCLA. To earn money, he auditioned for and won a role on the television series "Gunsmoke."

His credits later included parts in "Cheyenne," "Zane Grey Theater" and "Have Gun, Will Travel."

Weighing 14 pounds at his birth, Mr. Blocker was said to be the biggest baby ever born in Bowie County. He once acknowledged that he spent much of his youth fighting older boys, and smiled when he acknowledged that he was called "the big one."

Mr. Blocker was attending San Ross State College in Alpine, Texas, on a football scholarship when he was offered a nonspeaking part in a school play. He said later it was then he became addicted to acting.

He graduated in 1960 with a degree in drama and rejected a professional football offer to play in a summer production in Bowie County. He later earned a role in the Broadway production of "King Lear" before leaving to work on a doctor's degree in education.

Mr. Blocker served in the Army during the Korean war, reaching the rank of first sergeant.

Two Executives Resign From French Radio-TV

PARIS, May 14 (Reuters).—French Premier Jacques Chaban-Delmas yesterday accepted the resignations of the two top men in the country's state-run ORTF radio-television network, a move that could herald a reorganization of the scandal-ridden corporation.

The resignations of director-general Jean-Jacques de Bresson and board chairman Pierre de Leusse, both former top government officials, follow severe condemnation by two parliamentary committees of alleged commercial payoffs at the ORTF.

Both committees said they found evidence that top-management officials had used their positions to obtain money from "clandestine advertising"—mainly the practice of letting cameras pan on to brand names during regular programs.

The committees also alleged that payoffs were made to have broadcasts held in tourist centers, thereby promoting those areas.

Neither of the men who resigned yesterday have been implicated in the scandals but they have come under fire for having been unaware of such practices.

Franco Has Tooth Extracted Returns to Cabinet Meeting

By Miguel Acoca

MADRID, May 14 (UPI).—Generalissimo Francisco Franco, who will be 80 in December, was reported yesterday to be fully recovered from the extraction of a throbbing abscessed tooth that caused him to cancel a major ceremonial appearance and a fishing trip.

"The chief of state is fine," said a spokesman at El Pardo Palace. "It was nothing. There are no complications."

Analysts who keep close tabs on Gen. Franco, however, were surprised Friday night when Information Minister Alfredo Sanchez Bella candidly announced that Gen. Franco had temporarily left his regular cabinet meeting to go to the dentist to have a tooth pulled. The minister explained that Gen. Franco's doctors had told him to cancel all activities for the next few days.

Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, Gen. Franco's designated successor, had replaced El Caudillo at the opening of the annual fair at the Casa de Campo Park in Madrid. The unexpected substitution gave rise to speculation that Gen. Franco was ill.

The unprecedented announcement was seen as an attempt to quell talk that Gen. Franco's health is failing. The minister was careful to emphasize that

Gen. Franco, who has a reputation for spartan behavior, returned to the cabinet to after the extraction, and resumed the chairmanship of the session until its end.

Informed sources denied Gen. Franco's face as swollen during the meeting. He was said to have had difficulty in speaking.

The cabinet agreed, according to sources, to announce the extraction if reporters asked about Gen. Franco's health during press conference after ministerial meeting.

N.Y. Police Arrest 1 Smashing Drug Ring

NEW YORK, May 14 (AP).—A $50-million-a-year narcotics operation in Harlem, which drugs were sold in grocery stores owned by a described as a big man in a trafficking, was smashed yesterday with the arrest of 11 persons.

In a so-called factory, reportedly high-grade heroin, diluted with other substances, was packaged, police seized over 100 kilograms of what they called heroin and processing equipment.

The big man of the ring, said, was Curtis Powell, 37, lives in what was described as a plush duplex apartment,

Extra Vote Truce or Strikes Ends in Italy

Textile Unions Plan to Occupy Factories

By Paul Hoffmann
ROME, May 14 (NYT).—Italy's returning this week to work, a two-week labor truce, decreed by the nation's three major trade union groups for last week's parliamentary elections, ended in what seems a police ambush among locals and chaplains to be first to go on strike.

Police actually, there were quite a number of unofficial minor work stoppages during the election period. Now, with the no-strike period ended, a telephone call was made by other groups being called by their unions in a cluster of strikes for higher pay or better job conditions. Textile workers, for instance, are under a strike order to be prepared to strike at a moment's notice.

The occupation of factories, ten during the last few years, has become a standard labor response here whenever an industrial enterprise lays off a part or all of its work force.

For several years, Italy has seen the country in Europe that is lost the most working hours through strikes. The labor truce has just ended, was too short to make this record.

Meanwhile, a new wave of labor conflicts looms as the three-year nationwide collective contracts in the metalworking, chemical, electric power, building, and other important industries come up for renegotiation later this year.

More than four million workers, a fifth of the Italian labor force, are directly affected by the forthcoming talks between unions and management.

Greece Rejects EEC Protest at Recent Arrests

ATHENS, May 14 (UPI).—The Greek government has rejected a "demands" protest by the European Economic Community over the recent arrest and deportation of Greek intellectuals to remote villages.

The Greek government considers the note of the executive committee of the EEC inadmissible in that it constitutes interference in the internal affairs of Greece. Athens Foreign Minister Christian Anagnostou Palamas said yesterday.

Both the tone and the contents of the note reflect a careless appraisal and prejudice on the part of the committee.

EEC president Sicco L. Mansueto handed Nikola Katapodis, Greece's deputy representative to the Common Market, a note on Wednesday voicing the committee's "indignation" about the arrest of Prof. John Papanastasiou, who negotiated Greece's association agreement with the Common Market in 1961, and Panayotis Panellakis, president of the Greek European Youth Movement.

Mr. Mansueto told Mr. Katapodis that the "association agreement with Greece remains strictly limited to its current scope, limiting that new trade concessions which were reached a week ago by the market's joint commission will not proceed.

Warm French Welcome for Queen Today

PARIS, May 14 (Reuters).—Britain's Queen Elizabeth II is assured of a warm welcome when she arrives here tomorrow on a five-day state visit. The visit will underline the close new friendship between France and Britain and symbolize British entry into the European community.

President Georges Pompidou will be at Orly airport to greet the queen at the start of the visit, her second state visit to France. She made her first one in 1957.

The political significance of the visit, combined with the fascination British royalty holds for republican Frenchmen, guarantee a friendly reception.

Mr. Pompidou would like her stay to make the same sort of impact as the legendary state visit here in 1903 by King Edward VII, who brought about the first real "entente cordiale."

The baggage of Queen Elizabeth and her party—1,980 pounds of it—arrived at Le Bourget airport today. It was turned over to the British Embassy.

French television plans live coverage of much of the visit. It comes at a timely moment on the European scene, a year after the Franco-British summit meeting that brought the two countries closer together, a few months after Britain signed the treaty to join the Common Market.

15 Dead in Malagasy Fighting Laid to 'Communist Agitators'

TANANARIVE, Malagasy Republic, May 14 (Reuters).—Rioters stormed this capital city's town hall today and set its first floor on fire in another outbreak of trouble springing from a student strike.

President Philibert Tsiranana declared a state of emergency in the country and warned against "Communist agitators" last night after fighting between security forces and students left 15 dead and about 150 injured, according to official figures.

Clashes continued in this city of 322,000 throughout this morning, and security forces used tear gas against groups assembling near the Radio Madagascar headquarters.

Official sources who reported the assault on the town hall attributed the new riots to hoodlums, and said the student strikers were not responsible.

The students, who have been on strike for three weeks, are demanding radical changes in the education system.

[The Associated Press reported that the students, 400 of whose leaders were arrested Friday night, are demanding a demarcation of French culture and new emphasis on Malagasy tradition. It reported that the students have asked workers to join in a general strike tomorrow.]

Independent Since '68
The Malagasy Republic, formerly called Madagascar, is the world's fourth largest island. Its 223,000-square-mile land mass lies in the Indian Ocean about 250 miles off the southeast African coast. It gained independence from France in 1960.

Today Cultural Affairs Minister Laurent Bolokeky, responsible for education, resigned. President Tsiranana replaced him with Nivson Ranoavimanana, a mathematician popular with the country's youth for his skill when he was a center-half on the national football team, when he was known as Ramones.

Mr. Ranoavimanana has most recently been chief of Tananarive Province, with the rank of secretary of state.

The outgoing minister, who had held the post for almost 10 years, becomes minister of labor and civil service. His new appointment involved minor cabinet changes.

Relative calm returned to the capital during the afternoon, but some like-bursting tear-gas grenades could still be heard in some parts of Tananarive.

Government sources have made it plain that they consider the disorders to go much deeper than student discontent.

Subversion Charged
Interior Minister Barthélemy Johany said yesterday that the student strike was a cloak for subversive political elements whose aim was to overthrow the Malagasy Republic's Social Democratic regime.

President Tsiranana broadcast tonight a new appeal for order. He said student demands would be studied with the seriousness they deserve.

The disorders are the worst since a year ago, when 45 leftists were officially reported to have been killed in clashes with security forces.

Japan Agrees to Lend Indonesia $186 Million

DAKART, May 14 (Reuters).—President Suharto returned here today from a five-day visit to Tokyo during which he won Japan's agreement in principle to grant Indonesia a loan of $186 million to develop the nation's oil industry.

A presidential spokesman said that the loan was not regarded as part of Japan's annual economic aid, given in conjunction with creditor countries of the Asian Governmental Group on Indonesia (AGGI).

Okinawa Shift Is Bad News To Prostitutes

TOKYO, May 14 (AP).—Ten thousand prostitutes face unemployment in Okinawa with the return of the island base to Japan. Prostitution is banned under Japanese law.

The Okinawa police are uncertain how soon or how strictly the law will be enforced. One official said legislation alone cannot end prostitution on the island.

Okinawa's economy has had little to sustain it except spending by the U.S. government on its military bases and by some 45,000 servicemen stationed there.

Dutch Liner Off Sandbar

Libel Finding Is Denounced By Hochhuth

He Says U.K. Court Failed to Get Facts

ZURICH, May 14 (AP).—German playwright Rolf Hochhuth, whose controversial play "Soldiers" earned him a libel conviction in London, said yesterday that there can be no real trial in the case by a British court as long as key witnesses of wartime events are bound by secrecy.

A London court sentenced Mr. Hochhuth on May 3 to pay £50,000 damages to a former Royal Air Force pilot for suggesting he had carried out a political murder for Winston Churchill.

Pilot Edward Fuchs, the play suggested, engineered the 1943 plane crash that killed Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, head of the Polish exile government. The play alleges the plot was conceived by Churchill to do Stalin a favor.

Mr. Hochhuth's statement, published by the Zurich Tages-Anzeiger, was his first reaction to the London trial, which he did not attend.

Military Secrecy
"The idea of a London court that I should pay the pilot... 50,000 pounds in damages has created the false impression that there was a trial in London. It did not take place, and it cannot take place as long as Her Majesty's government reminds all those Britons who would be ready to testify on the tragedy... of their secrecy as former military men, to which they are bound for the rest of their lives."

The court respected the government's demand and did not summon any Briton or Pole to obtain confirmation of such evidence or evidence on which... my drama "Soldiers" is based.

"The sole witness heard by the court was the plaintiff, just the pilot, who insisted he was the only one to escape alive from the crash. He piloted, although a Lord, a lieutenant, and a sailor, all British citizens, have stated this is not true."

14 Die as Bus, Truck Collide in Tennessee

BEAN STATION, Tenn., May 14 (AP).—A Greyhound bus carrying 28 persons and a cargo truck crashed in flames in a mountainous area of Tennessee early yesterday. Fourteen persons were killed and 15 injured, three critically.

There was no immediate explanation of the cause of the accident, which occurred on dry pavement on a relatively straight stretch of U.S. Highway 11-W in the foothills of the Great Smoky Mountains. Both drivers were killed.

Smallpox Rages In Bangladesh; Death Toll High

DAKKA, Bangladesh, May 14 (NYT).—A virulent smallpox epidemic of "major proportions" has broken out in Bangladesh, according to the health authorities in this transportation hub, a center of the rapidly spreading infection.

More than 2,500 cases and 700 deaths have been reported officially in the Khulna administrative division and around Rangpur, in northern Bangladesh, but doctors estimate that the actual figures for the country as a whole are 10 times as large.

The source of the infection has been traced to Hindu refugees centers in India, particularly the large camp at Salt Lake, near Calcutta," said Dr. Strajal Islam, deputy director of health for the Khulna division.

The disease, brought to Bangladesh by Hindu refugees returning from India, has spread to the resident Muslim population, Dr. Islam said. The outbreak first noted late in April, has not been reported in the press, which is government-controlled.

Nkrumah Burial Held in Guinea

DAKAR, Senegal, May 14 (AP).—The body of former President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana was placed today in the Camayenne mausoleum in Conakry, Guinea, the Guinean radio reported.

Referring to the mausoleum as Mr. Nkrumah's "last resting place," the radio seemed to indicate that the body would not be returned to Ghana.

Mr. Nkrumah, 62, had lived in Guinea during most of his exile since a Ghana coup ousted him in 1966. He died April 27 while under treatment in Bucharest for cancer.

Plan Attacked in Athens Press

Greek General Defends U.S. Home-Port Plan

ATHENS, May 14 (NYT).—The general in charge of Greece's military forces today welcomed plans for U.S. warships to use a port near Athens and dismissed suggestions that the presence of American Navy families here might raise social problems.

Gen. Odysseus Angheli, chief of the Greek armed forces for the last five years, in his first interview published in Athens, also warned today that unless NATO countries build up their conventional forces they will have to resort to nuclear weapons in case of conflict.

The 58-year-old general, who commands about 200,000 Greek soldiers, sailors and airmen and backs up the present nonparliamentary regime, said in a two-page interview printed in the Athens daily Eleftheros Kosmos: "If Soviet naval buildup keeps up at the present rate, [the Soviet Union] will surpass United States naval strength within very few years."

Gen. Angheli said that the presence of the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean "is an essential factor of balance—both as a deterrent and for support of the south flank [of NATO] in case of Soviet bloc aggression."

He disclosed that Greece and the United States were currently discussing home port facilities for six American warships beginning later this year. They would berth probably in the bay of Elefsis, west of Athens. "Later, [by the end of 1973 or early 1974, two or three more warships will be added. These will probably berth in the Bay of Megara, further west," he said.

"These arrangements are purely administrative and have no strategic value whatever," he said.

Gen. Angheli rejected suggestions that the settlement of U.S. Navy families in the Athens area might cause social problems. "There is a population of 2.5 million in this area," he said. "The home port facilities involve a total of 9,600 persons including officers and men and their families... Some 60,000 foreigners reside permanently in the Athens area today, including 3,000 American diplomats and military with their families. How can the situation change by adding 10,000 more?"

The general said that there were 30,000 tourists in the country daily at any one time. "Social threat comes more from the stray tourists, some of whom would be 85 percent in favor of higher defense spending. But the politicians are forever vying with each other to cut down on defense."

Greece has curbed its politicians since the 1967 military coup that elevated Gen. Angheli to the top military job. "Western society," he argued, "suffers from boredom, sensuality and greed. It is not willing to spend for maintaining the military balance. Yet NATO leaders have warned that its forces are unable to match the Soviet bloc on the conventional plane and will be forced to resort to nuclear weapons from the opening stages of a [conflict]."

The Problem of Power

"Everyone knows," said Le Duc Tho on Friday, "that the most arduous problem now existing" between the two opposing sides in Vietnam "is the problem of power in South Vietnam." And, as Mr. Tho did not say, everyone knows that the chief obstacle to a resolution of that problem is that neither side trusts the other's professed goals.

Both Hanoi and Washington have stated that their purposes are not military victory, but a political settlement. Mr. Nixon has offered to extract all American forces, after an internationally supervised cease-fire goes into effect, and American prisoners are returned. Mr. Tho, speaking for his government, insists on a political arrangement before a cease-fire, one which would require President Thieu's resignation and the reorganization of the Saigon government, based on a tripartite grouping. The latter bears a close resemblance to the Laotian "settlement," in which the government was composed of royalists (substitute supporters of the existing regime in Saigon), Pathet Lao (substitute Viet Cong) and neutralists.

Neither program would insure a good government for South Vietnam. Mr. Nixon's latest statement says nothing about the kind of political arrangements that might be worked out after a cease-fire; the Laos precedent is not a happy one for Mr. Tho's outlined plan. But either would bring an end to the current fighting and permit American forces to be withdrawn.

If, as Hanoi maintains, Vietnamization is a failure, what has it to fear from a cease-fire, if that produces the withdrawal of all American forces? On the other hand, the military successes of North Vietnam thus far in its offensive have been primarily at the expense of the people in whose interests it says it is fighting. To be sure, after the Americans pull out, the odium of the war will doubtless be placed by official Vietnamese organs upon them—but the people of South Vietnam will not forget they were bombed by troops of North Vietnam, or massacred (in Hue, for example, during the Tet offensive) by the Viet Cong.

As for the Americans, they have good reason to doubt the practicality, in any democratic terms, of a popular-front government. There is a long history of debilitating frictions and perversions of popular will under such circumstances. Nevertheless, a similar degree of uncertainty and risk would undoubtedly result from withdrawing all American forces under a cease-fire, without any political settlement at all.

In other words, when all the oratory is blown aside, the framework for an end to the Vietnamese war—or at least a more or less prolonged pause in its most acute agonies—does exist. It would be worse than folly to permit responsible statesmen to compound those agonies because of pride, mutual suspicions or a continuation of the search for political ends by Clausewitz's "other means."

Tighter Steel Quotas

The art of political euphemism achieves golden heights whenever the government proclaims new barriers to foreign trade. Now it is President Nixon declaring his pleasure in announcing that "the steel producers of Japan, the European community and the United Kingdom have expressed their intention to restrain on a voluntary basis their exports of steel mill products to the United States during the next three years." This voluntary agreement, he says, "represents a substantial improvement over the arrangements of the last three years and will enable domestic steel producers to make their plans with confidence that imports will not be disruptive..."

Translated from Orwellian double talk into ordinary English, this announcement would have read: "The United States government, acting as bargaining agent for American steel producers, has talked and threatened the steel cartels of Europe and Japan into accepting a stiff cut in their quotas, thereby further restricting competition in the American steel market."

The United States government, by warning of worse protectionist moves of the kind envisaged in the Hartke-Burke bill if the foreign producers did not accede, got them to accept a 10 percent reduction in their quotas from last year, an annual rate of increase of only 2.5 percent in sales to this country (compared to a 5 percent growth rate under the 1969-71 quota agreement) and tight tonnage limits on product categories, which will further limit competition.

Thus the United States government has done what the steel industry could not do for itself because of the anti-trust laws. It has, in effect, put together the old international steel cartel. From an American standpoint, this move reduces the threat of further incursions by more efficient foreign producers and, in due course, would enable American producers to raise prices sharply without threat of losing their share of the domestic market.

This has already been the effect of the 1969-71 quota agreement. From 1960 until the end of 1968, steel prices were remarkably stable, rising at an annual rate of only three-quarters of 1 percent because they were held in check by foreign competition. But, in three years since the steel import quotas went into effect, steel prices have risen at an annual rate of 7.2 percent, or 10 times as fast. The steel industry, following the lead of Bethlehem Steel Corp., has now undertaken to maintain current price schedules until next January, but it will be interesting to see what happens thereafter, since the import quotas will continue while price controls may or may not.

This disguised national subsidy to the domestic steel industry is likely to prove costly to American consumers and to other steel-using American producers as well, in their struggle for markets at home and abroad. Cost-cutting becomes a merry-go-round when unions feel free to demand increases well above productivity gains, knowing that protection from foreign competition will permit producers to pass price hikes on to domestic consumers. Indeed, the absence of foreign competition also eliminates a spur to productivity and efficiency, intensifying the problem.

In the long run, it will do neither the American steel industry nor the economy generally any good to be insulated from foreign competition. Protection breeds demands for still greater protection. The thrust of American economic policy should be in just the opposite direction—toward freer international trade. This will demand far greater stress on the domestic adjustments needed to keep American industry competitive and on programs to shift workers into fields where job opportunities are growing.

The nation needs a strong and healthy steel industry—both for economic and national security reasons—but there has not been adequate governmental study of how large that industry should be or of measures that will help the industry reach desirable objectives in terms of product mix and location as well as total size. Instead, national policy has represented an ad hoc protectionist response to immediate political pressures. The administration may indeed seek to cleave to liberal trade principles, as its spokesmen insist, yet, by too ready acquiescence to the demands of favored industries, it undermines its own basic objectives.

Elizabeth in France

The queen's state visit to France this week puts the crown of success on Mr. Heath's policy of integrating Britain with Europe. But unlike earlier manifestations of the entente cordiale this will not be an exclusive Anglo-French affair, aimed at Germany. It will be an occasion for general European rejoicing, just as in the recent past Anglo-French hostility has been an occasion of general European regret.

That the French will give our monarch an enthusiastic welcome is nothing new. But that all Europe will enjoy the spectacle and join in the cheering—that really is new, and highly encouraging.

Unreality

U.S. presidential speeches on Vietnam—whether from Johnson or Nixon—have always had something unreal about them. It is not an ocean that separates the California coast from Indochina but a bottomless political and cultural gulf. To be convinced of this, it is enough to hear with what contempt the White House speaks of the adversary and how the richest nation in the world talks of "international outlaws," the "law" being of course the one Washington intends to dictate.

LAKEPORT, Calif.—Mrs. Lily Langtry obtained her divorce in the courts here today on the evidence of witnesses from London. There was no opposition to the suit, and Mr. Langtry did not appear. Mrs. Langtry, on her first visit to California some years ago, leased a cozy cottage on Liberty Heights, at the Mission in San Francisco, and took up her residence there with a view to becoming a legal resident, in order to obtain a divorce.

Fifty Years Ago

May 15, 1922

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Although it is a long time until November, when 34 members of the United States Senate and 435 members of the House of Representatives are to be elected, primary campaigns are in full blast in many of the states and others will start soon. Many of the contests are of more than passing interest, involving the renomination or defeat of men long in the public life of the nation. The next primary of importance is in Pennsylvania.

The Lessons of History

By James Reston

WASHINGTON—If there is any redeeming quality about this giddy nuclear age, it is that Moscow and Washington seem to know when to hold back when one of them risks a major collision with the other. They both go crazy from time to time, but not together.

When the Soviet Union invaded Hungary and later Czechoslovakia, risking a clash with the United States to impose Moscow's control over Eastern Europe, Washington absorbed the confrontation. When the British and French used force to achieve their critical objectives in the Suez crisis, Moscow, which could have slaughtered them both, held its fire.

When Khrushchev misjudged President Kennedy after the Vienna summit and ran into Kennedy's blockade against placing Soviet missiles in Cuba, the Moscow Politburo turned the missile ships around and fired Nikita.

And now, again, when President Nixon, facing the collapse of his whole policy in Vietnam, turned loose the bombers and the mines and challenged Soviet power, Moscow has turned away from the challenge and re-invited him to the Soviet Union to talk about the more important questions of the world.

Well, this is some kind of progress, not much but some. The President and Secretary of Defense Laird and Secretary of State Rogers, all of whom know better, have been complaining that Moscow has been irresponsible and even reckless in supplying far less arms to Hanoi than they have to Saigon, and they are now very pleased with themselves that the Moscow summit is apparently going on, and the White House press secretary, Ron Ziegler, in the exuberance of his 33d birthday, is proclaiming the success of the President's military and diplomatic policy.

The main point, however, is quite different. Moscow could have accepted the President's military challenge. The Soviets were not blocked by the U.S. mines in Haiphong. They could have flown missiles to Hanoi, as they did to Cairo, that could have attacked the U.S. aircraft carriers whose bombers are now ranging over the battlefields of Hue and Kontum, and attacking the railroads from China to Hanoi, and seeding Haiphong harbor with mines.

Power Restained

But so far, they have restrained their power. The U.S. has throughout the Vietnam war, as Washington did when Moscow risked a major war over Hungary and Czechoslovakia. The critical decisions of avoiding world war now rest with Washington and Moscow. They are both the most powerful and least experienced of the major states. They have totally different philosophies of life, and conflicting vital national interests in their relations with the two rising industrial powers of Japan and Germany. But they both have as much to lose by major war as anybody else, so at the moment of ultimate crisis they usually tend to draw back.

The result of this mutual terror and selfishness between Washington and Moscow is not too bad. The Western Europeans, who dominated world politics in the 18th and 19th centuries, think the new world giants are often clumsy, boorish and reckless, which is true, but at least the new giants have managed to avoid a world war under their awkward and provocative leadership for 77 years—seven more than the tragic 1919-39 span between the two world wars—and, while they both jockey for position and fight limited battles against one another all over the world, they don't let pride and conflict over secondary issues provoke them into a major war.

Nixon has been asking, almost pleading, with Moscow and Peking to help him out of his troubles in Vietnam, and even offering concessions which amount to a concealed surrender. But they don't help him much, and keep on supplying arms to Hanoi. But when he feels trapped, and takes a risk, they avoid his challenge, condemn his bombing, and invite him to Moscow to talk about more important things.

The men in the Kremlin don't mind if Nixon uses the Moscow summit in his campaign for reelection, or pretends that his bombing and mining in North Vietnam has forced Moscow to climb down. They have already given Hanoi enough modern arms to fight the battle for Hue, even against U.S. air and naval power, so they are waiting, and talking, and letting their officials go to the White House and have their pictures taken with the President as if the crisis in Vietnam were nothing more than an awkward incident in U.S.-Soviet relations.

Let him bomb, and mine, and bluster all he likes, Moscow seems to be saying, while he withdraws his troops. Moscow is willing to save his face, and tolerate his threats, just so he doesn't go too far and keeps digging himself into deeper trouble. This is irritating for Moscow, but tolerable. It makes Washington look reckless and Moscow patient.

But one thing Moscow will not do in Vietnam anymore than Washington did in the crises of Hungary and Czechoslovakia: it will not let the provocations and propaganda filter down into a test of strength between the nuclear giants. It will let Nixon do what he can to get out of his mess in Vietnam, but it will not let minor problems provoke it into a major war, and this is at least a little better than in the days when the great powers went to war over the murder of an archduke in the Balkans.

Will the Horse Speak Soon?

By C. L. Sulzberger

PARIS—Seventeen years ago, that hardy political perennial, Harold Stassen, headed President Eisenhower's Foreign Operations Administration and was worrying about Vietnam. He told me (Jan. 13, 1955):

"We now feel the Communists cannot take Indochina except by force. The main problem is: Are you going to maintain an army going to maintain a dictatorship system in order to maintain it, or are you going to build an army only large enough to defend the internal security of the country and at the same time permit the improvement of living standards by not being too big a burden on the country's economy?"

Nobody, he continued, could be "sure that we are going to be able to hold Vietnam but, on the other hand, we cannot give up while there is even one chance in fifty." He told a story about a certain man condemned to death by the Emperor. The man begged only one last favor. When asked what, he said: "Before I die I would like to be able to teach the Emperor's favorite black horse to speak."

This intrigued the Emperor, who inquired how long it would take to do this. The condemned man answered probably he could accomplish it within a year. When he returned to prison, his cellmates asked how he had saved himself from execution. He explained:

"They then asked: 'But do you really think you can teach the horse to speak?' The man replied: 'Anything can happen within a year. I might die a pleasant, peaceful death. The Emperor might die. And, who knows, I might even teach the horse to speak.'"

During the second Eisenhower administration and those of Kennedy and Johnson, this policy of equine education persisted with a steady increment in U.S. interest: more and more advice, money, arms and eventually men. Yet, despite bloody battles and feverish diplomacy, nothing definitive happened.

When President Nixon took office he sent for various private advisers among whom was Dean Acheson, the former Secretary of State and an ardent Nixon opponent. Acheson told the new President that we had in Vietnam too small a force to crush the opposition and too large a force to be accepted by the patience of the American people.

Nixon eventually concluded that Acheson was right. He brought back most of our ground troops and scheduled the return of the rest. This was the heart of "Vietnamization" and a Nixon doctrine based on the precept that Uncle Sam helps those who help themselves.

Although the war is now in its most heated stage and huge U.S. aerial and naval armadas are directly engaged, there are no ground actions involving Americans. If the Saigon regime is able, with this notable assistance, to stand off General Giap, perhaps the horse will at last begin to speak.

That is a very big "if." Yet, it is apparent that Moscow and Peking are almost as eager as Washington to prevent the Indochina conflict from getting out of hand.

One cannot sensibly speculate on the present military situation. A French general who formerly commanded the country's Indochina forces claims Giap is in danger at An Loc because if he cannot overrun that provincial capital he will be unable to extricate his troops as he can do at Hue. Who knows? The French were not notable for their strategic successes against Giap.

Nevertheless, should this latest campaign bog down in another stalemate, further negotiations will inevitably begin. The primordial question remains: Can a new political regime be created in Saigon that will not be devoured from within by Hanoi's tentacles?

Dutch Approach

The United States thinks the Communists resemble the Dutch about whom British Foreign Secretary George Canning commented in 1838: "In matters of commerce the fault of the Dutch is offering too little and asking too much."

Washington and Saigon still hope Hanoi can be brought around to a more tolerant view and that when this happens an ultimately successful settlement can be arranged. But prior to that conclusive moment the success or failure of Giap's offensive on the battlefield must decide if Hanoi is at last prepared for a diplomatic formula. Only then will we discover if the horse has really learned to speak.

DWIGHT B. DECKER, Salzburg, Austria.

Enough Sacrifice

Once again we see the desperate lashing-out in frustration that characterizes our President's approach to Vietnam (NYT May 9). We've sacrificed enough to help the South Vietnamese, apparently with little effect on their ability to defend themselves. The American people must publicly reject this obsessed leadership before our nation becomes "locked-in" on its mistakes, as did the German people in the 1930s.

BOB and DORIS ZUMWALT, Notre Dame de Gravenchon, France.

Reviewing Reviews

Anatole Broyard is obviously a good book reviewer for he seems to have survived re-reviewing "De-Definition of Art" by Harold Rosenberg (NYT, May 3), appropriately ending his effort with "Amen. And Hokey."

Yet I feel that book reviewing should be specialized. The reviewing of books on modern art, for example, should be entrusted to the care of qualified psychiatrists. Then of course we could have reviewers capable of reviewing the reviews of the psychiatrists, and so on.

Mr. Rosenberg is generally regarded as the high priest and leading exponent of that arcane domain known as the avant-garde, where "unintelligibility" is the hallmark of achievement.

We learn, with some relief, that the newest movements are tending towards the purely conceptual (non-visual), thus merging art into philosophy.

On the other hand, all the stuff in the museums will evidently serve the future mainly as record to bear witness to past failure or folly.

S. N. MESSIAN.

The Real Enemy

The dogged persistence of the United States toward a military victory, which now clearly seems the intention, is senseless. I seriously question the stated goal to preserve the South Vietnam.

territory it occupied between World Wars I and II. The hypocrisy of the Soviet Union, which attacked Poland in the opening move of World War II to get its lost territory back but now poses itself against "revanchism" in regard to lost German territory, is obvious.

In a day when Soviet atom bombs could obliterate West Germany within minutes, it is questionable if the concern of Poland and the Soviet Union is really with security from the West Germans. Even so, propaganda from the Communists adopts a curiously defensive tone whenever it speaks of so-called West German "revanchism," as if the Communists realize full well the Germans have every right to be revanchist.

CHESTER GILLIS, Jr., Louvain, Belgium.

Ostpolitik

Has it taken Mr. Harriman (NYT, May 5) only four years to forget Soviet tanks in Prague? How does he expect the Poles to exercise their natural and historic desire to look toward the West, even if they should happen to feel such an urge once they are "secure"?

Such a vague dream seems a poor price to pay for recognizing the legitimacy of one of this century's more tragic acts of aggression, as the Brandt treaty did. Poland has no more right to German territory east of the Oder-Neisse than it did to the vast segment of patently Rus-

The Laughin At McGovern Has Stoppe

By Don Oberdorfer

WASHINGTON—They long when he sat down to a seemingly hapless and hapless one-note Johnny from the Dakota applying for the big job in the nation and the That was 16 months ago, when he formally declared his candidacy—but hardly anyone laughing today.

As matters stand, Sen. George McGovern, D. S. D., has a chance to win the Democratic presidential nomination, depending largely on an abroad now hanging in the air—a fair to excellent chance to be elected.

He is a paradoxical figure, a serene and gentle-faced burning ambition and some convictions and proposals, son of a minister and the pastor of a church at Monticello, Minn., while a Methodist theological seminary his youth, he comes on as a teacher or a counsellor, politician. Unlike most other political figures, he often speaks of morality and justice and taken to closing his speeches with a passage of Deuteronomy.

Perhaps because he is doing there is something elusive about McGovern, the candidate, a figure difficult to analyze, to put in the context of political standards. Somehow, the himself seems less vivid, many of those around him through all those months of the beginning of his crusade, is told, his was the greatest most unshakable certainty it would succeed.

Prospects Bright

The prospect, which seemed dim for so long, has never brighter. The early and, in principle, have narrowed Democratic presidential stakes to a race between McGovern and Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D. Minn. Both of paigns are rolling down the toward the California prize, a little more than three weeks from now. It may well be decided if McGovern beats Humphrey in California, the primary campaign will be granddamed and nobody else seems likely to stop it. McGovern, it is particularly if President Nixon's huge gain in Indochina does not pay off.

Given the crucial importance of the California primary, McGovern campaign is marshaling its forces. "Work for Sen. McGovern in exalted California. By one, two or three weeks in ward, exciting West Coast areas," said a handbill in McGovern headquarters at On. Net, last week, and an anticipated 25,000 to 30,000 volunteers outside or inside the state massing on the coast to do that.

Using computer techniques of village workers, 62 area offices organized assembly district lines, McGovern operations plan a telephone mass of more than a million ocratic households in the capped by personal visits to those who indicate an in in their tiger. If it comes planned, this will be a grass politics campaign of stage proportions.

Should McGovern win forna and the Democratic ination, the same technique likely to be employed in the campaign against Mr. J. Planning for that is now way. The McGovern organization has carefully collected and saved the card files of the thousands of volunteers who worked in the primary and primary campaigns across the nation, some in nearly every. This large army of com volunteers would be again by vast numbers of add recruits garnered through adon ads and other appeal help in a "people's crusade."

Problems Remain

Many problems still stand the way, including charges being "radical" on abortion or other social issues intended undercut him with Catholics and, charges of being a radical committed to Jewish voters. The conventional wisdom is that when votes McGovern's positions on de taxes and other issues to be further left than his pstyle, many of them will away. This may or may not be true.

Those who tend to with this unusual and often-candidacy as "too far out taking a risk." I hope the people do to George McGovern who the Democrats did estimate him," said his political coordinator, Gary in Nebraska last week. "do that, we'll kill them."

Fail to Rekindle Fires About Dollar

Among the issues still on off Williams & Glyn's is reported to be the hottest and the size of its $25 million loan could be increased. The coupon on the year issue is expected at 8 percent.

The Japanese will reportedly account for a "substantial" placement of the $15 million convertible for International Chemical & Nuclear Corp.'s ION Overseas Capital, expected with a 1 1/4 percent coupon and a conversion premium of between 12 and 14 percent. The $25 million for General American Transportation, expected to carry 8 1/4 percent coupon, is reportedly already oversubscribed with pricing not due until May 17.

The pricing of two DM issues last week raised some eyebrows. Both Manitoba-Hydro Electric and the City of Kelowna were offering 100 million DM 15-year bonds at 6 3/4 per cent. Manitoba was priced at par (and subsequently traded a shade low) and Kobe was priced at 98 1/2 (and was trading at a slight premium). Some banks said that if anything, the price should have been vice-versa with Kobe getting the better price to reflect its higher standing.

Meanwhile, the 6 3/4 percent level on foreign DM bonds is finding acceptance among the investors who feel the high coupons available on dollars in France is not enough to offset what they see as the potential

Late last week, the German central capital market committee approved three new foreign issues—100 million DM for the Inter-American Development Bank, 80 million DM for Mobil

NEW YORK, May 14 (NYT)—International problems—the Vietnam situation and the continuing debate over world monetary reform—weighed heavily on business and economic communities last week.

The net effect was another nervous, erratic week in the markets, but the gloom and the rations were not so deep as some analysts had feared after the blockade that President Nixon announced against North Vietnam.

The stock market ended the week with little net change while the free price of gold rose to new heights in the London gold market with the further erosion of the dollar's status.

The psychological factors that tended to weaken the security markets here were largely of the fundamental reality of pervasive strength in the US

At the beginning of the war it appeared that a severe bout of nervous liquidation might seriously unsettle the stock market following the Nixon television drama on Monday night. With a 20-point loss early on Tuesday the stock market was once again demonstrating its antipathy to the war in Southeast Asia.

Some Selling Pressure
However, after a relatively brief and mild flurry of selling pressure, the market regained composure and moved cautiously for the rest of the week as

Wall Street was apprehensive first that the new U.S. strategy might ultimately lead to increased defense spending, bigger budget deficits, increased inflation and thus a rebirth of the tensions that destroyed business and consumer confidence in the latter part of the 1960s, when this country extended its involvement in Vietnam.

It is clear now that the escalation of the U.S. commitment in South Vietnam after 1965—when federal government outlays were climbing about 15 percent annually—has not produced a significant increase in U.S. military spending or an increase in taxes next year. However, doubts on both points have been expressed elsewhere.

Worry over the dollar and over plans for international monetary reform was real but less decisive in last week's market action. But it was a definite factor, as was the escalation of the Vietnam war, in the new surge in the price of gold.

Amex and Over-Counter

NEW YORK, May 14 (NYT). Stocks on the American Stock Exchange shrugged off the Vietnam crisis last week. In fact, as measured by the index, the prices closed at 27.48, down 0.05, a small move even for a week without international impact.

Despite a very busy day following President Nixon's speech on the mining of North Vietnam harbors, volume rose to only 20.8 million shares for the week compared with 19.8 million the previous week.

In the Over-the-Counter market the NASDAQ index reacted with a show of strength, closing at 137.57.

Banister-Continental, a pipeline contractor, led the most active list on the American Stock Exchange, with 503,000 shares and a final price of 25 5/8, up 1 3/8. The company may have benefited from speculative interest following word of government approval of Syntex, which recently lost more than 25 points following talk about a contract dispute with one of its big customers, held quite steady during the week. Despite heavy volume of 235,000 shares it

Perhaps the week's most spectacular mover was Harrah's, the gambling casino operation, which rose 17 points on the week, to end at 58 5/8. There was no special news during the week, but

In the Over-the-Counter market, bank stocks were described as inactive and little changed during the week. Among the industrials, brokers talked about some notable gains in advertising company shares, with Ogilvy Mather up about 7 points to 65, and Doyle Dane Bernbach up 2 to 29 3/4. Orleole Land rose 1 to 27 1/4, and Pak-Well was up 3 to 25 1/2, perhaps bolstered by announcement of a 2-for-1 stock split.

shortage of gold for industrial purposes has been a factor in the upsurge, but renewed speculation because of the dollar's problems and U.S. procrastination on monetary reform was also responsible.

There was a minimal amount of news developments in the economic area last week, but those that did surface were mostly favorable.

Retail statistics continued to be generally strong. The latest report of the nation's purchasing agents disclosed further improvement in business during April. And the Pay Board cut back the East Coast dock wage settlement to 2.8 percent for the first year from the 12.1 percent agreement reach-

The stock market ended the week thoroughly mixed, with little net change in the leading market indexes. In relatively light trading, a recovery late in the week virtually erased all of the

At the close on Friday, there were 984 issues on the New York Stock Exchange that showed losses for the week, compared with 733 that had gains and 203 that

The major market yardsticks also displayed a narrowly mixed picture, with the blue-chips up slightly and the broad-based indexes down moderately.

The Dow-Jones industrial stock average advanced only 0.60 point to 941.83 and the New York Times combined average of 50 stocks gained 2.14 to 599.46. However, Standard & Poor's 500-stock

Volume on the Big Board also showed little change, with the week's turnover totaling 71.9 million shares.

West Germany, Belgium Gain in Soccer

LONDON, May 14 (Reuters).—West Germany reached the semifinals of the European Nations Soccer Cup for the first time by holding England to a scoreless tie in the second leg of their quarterfinal match at Wembley, London, today. The Germans had scored a stunning victory in the first leg, 3-1, at Wembley, England.

In other second-leg quarterfinals, Belgium beat Italy 2-1, at Brussels; and Czechoslovakia beat Czechoslovakia, 3-0, at Moscow.

Romania and Hungary tied today at Bucharest, 2-2 forcing a replay Wednesday at Belgrade to decide which team will play Russia in the semifinals. The first-leg match, in Budapest, was also a tie, 1-1.

England tried to compensate for its deficiencies by tight marking and heavy tackling, which brought prolonged hooting from the 77,000 fans in the Olympic Stadium.

West German manager Helmut Schoen later criticized England for its "brutal tackling" which he said was "aimed at the bones."

England used a 4-4-2 line-up which gave it a tight defense and quick attack, but failed to provide the thrust necessary to pierce a German defense once again superbly marshalled by Franz Beckenbauer.

Belgium's victory was only its second in international matches against Italy and earned it the right to stage the semifinal tournament, starting on June 14, in which it will meet West Germany.

Italy, runner-up in the 1970 Mexico World Cup, was rarely on even terms with the hard-running Belgians, who held Italy to a scoreless draw in Milan in the first leg.

The victory lost some of its lustre, however, when midfield general Wilfried van Moer, who headed in a free kick for the game's first goal in the 23d minute, broke a leg late in the first half in a collision with Italian fullback Mario Bertini.

BEFORE THE DELUGE

A Portrait of Berlin in the 1920s
By Otto Friedrich, Harper & Row, 418 pp. Illustrated, $12.95
Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

PERHAPS I am peculiar in my fascination with the city of Berlin—I lived there during the 19th year of my life in the post-war years 1947 and 1948, and ever since I have been mildly obsessed with trying to imagine what the city was like before the war. But I suspect that I am not alone in this. The Berlin of Weimar Germany is all around us to this day, not only on the screen of "Cabaret," but in our music, art and architecture; not only in our political imaginations, but in what is common to all great cities in times of political, financial and cultural crisis. And if anyone thinks that New York is morally corrupt today, he need only look at the Berlin of the 1920s to understand what corruption can really mean. So the prospect of reading Otto Friedrich's latest book, "Before the Deluge: A Portrait of Berlin in the 1920s," was an exciting one to me, just as it ought to be to many other readers. I should think.

But when I actually sat down to read Mr. Friedrich's book I began to wonder just how a writer can go about portraying the past life of an entire city, especially if he was born too late to experience it as Mr. Friedrich was. (People have often observed that a city is haunted by its past, but when I was in Berlin I could see nothing but rubble and hungry people.) Is the writer to approach his subject impressionistically? Impossible, if he has no first-hand impressions. Then, through the testimony of friends and relations? Impractical, unless he happens to be the grandson of Hindenburg or the nephew of Marlene Dietrich. Fictionality? No, we've already had "The Winds of War."

No, what the writer has to do, apparently, in the case of Weimar Berlin, is to read the histories and memoirs of the period, talk to the survivors who will talk to him, extrapolate from novels set in the locale, and write the whole story chronologically from the abdication of Kaiser Wilhelm II in 1918 to the torchlight parade that celebrated Hitler's coming to power in 1933. And let the chips fall where they may.

At least that is what Otto Friedrich has done. He has devoted most of his book to a straightforward account of the political story—the revolutionary upheavals that followed the Armistice, the "betrayal" of the revolution and the formation of the Constitutional Republic under the Social Democrats; Friedrich also, the staggering financial difficulties that plagued the already unstable experiment in democracy; and the rise and triumph of Nazism. And into this historical fabric he has embroidered a portrait of Berlin's cultural, intellectual and social life, using as his threads whatever he could pull from biographies of people like Einstein and Arnold Schoenberg; memoirs by the likes of Walter Slezak, Karl Zuckmayer and Pola Negri; interviews with such as W.H. Auden, Yehudi Menuhin and Christopher Isherwood; and even scenes from the Berlin novels of Vladimir Nabokov (since Mr. Friedrich never talked to the Russian emigre directly).

This approach pays many debts. Mr. Friedrich happens to be a skillful narrator of his so his account of the tumultuous political events is unusually clear and vivid. He is able to cover everything from the most lurid sex-murder from Berlin's decadent night scene to the building of the Zeppelins; from the revolution in the physical sciences, working Einstein and Heisenberg to the murder of Nabokov's father by Berlin Philharmonic. By piecing details in the historical text, he succeeds in coming behind the making of "The Blue Angel," "The Threepenny Opera" and Fritz Lang's "M," and making clear how far the German movie "Cabaret" has gone from the events that inspired original Isherwood stories, which it is based. ("I am camera with its shutter open they began.")

And for those readers who taste for colorful trivia he has the news of what a Josef Sternberg assistant said he asked what he thought of the Dietrich for the part of Lola in "The Blue Angel" ("Der Post nicht schlecht, aber brauchen nicht auch ein Gesicht?"; Mr. Friedrich translates as "what overpainted as 'Not a bad from the rear, but don't also need a face?') as well as gossip that the original for the blonde who was nearly in London today, and that W. Israel, on whom Isherwood based Herr Lotz, died in the same plane crash that killed the Howard.

All the same, there is something disappointing about this—something routinely chafed about its narrative, something derivative about its contents. The use of the elaborate historical framework events pays diminishing returns: In long run it begins to seem as Mr. Friedrich is organizing material at random, and try to fit his details wherever it will pleasantly go. And with a few exceptions, most of what is in has been told before, and can read in well known books of the period. (One can always experience "Before the Deluge" simply scanning Mr. Friedrich's "Notes on Sources.")

"When you start a sentence German, you have to know the beginning what the end will be. In English, you live the sentence through to its end. In German, they're divorced. Everything is abstract. That was they made abstractions of. They didn't kill them as in English. The very, we should say, is an abstract. This is the profoundest in the book, and it came in the lips of Yehudi Menuhin saying one of Mr. Friedrich's live interviews. One can pathize with the handicap, faced, but Otto Friedrich's camera, he is simply a entertaining slide projector.

Beltoise Scores
in Monaco Prix

By Mike Katz

MONTE CARLO, May 14 (UPI)—Jean-Pierre Beltoise, who had more than his share of trouble in his life, drove brilliantly today to win the slow Grand Prix of Monaco in a 35-year-old son of a Paris car.

Beltoise, who lost his first wife in an automobile accident and was suspended for months last year for his involvement in a fatal crash, drove through traffic on the slippery track at the average speed of 100 miles an hour to score his triumph in a world championship event.

Beltoise finished 38.3 seconds ahead of Jackie Fittipaldi, who was the only other driver to finish in the top 10. Fittipaldi was the only driver to be on the same lap as Beltoise with the winner.

Beltoise had a hard time in the race, starting less than an hour after the 80-lap, 16.2-kilometer race. He was one of those who can't brake quickly enough on the slippery track to make the 6-turn, but still finished eighth in his Lotus-Ford and took a lead in the world driver's championship with 19 points.

Beltoise's past performances have been mixed. He left a 1968 season with a broken arm, a 1969 season with a broken arm, and a 1970 season with a broken arm.

Twins, Brewers Split in 37 Innings

NEW YORK, May 14 (UPI)—Eric Soderholm hit a two-run homer with two out in the 15th inning yesterday to give the Minnesota Twins a 3-4 home victory over Milwaukee after the Brewers had won a game suspended after 21 innings on Friday night, 4-3, on a run-scoring single by Mike Ferraro in the 23d inning.

Saturday

The two-day total of 37 innings between the two teams established an American League record.

Ferraro had given the Brewers a 4-3 lead in the top of the 15th of the regularly scheduled game with a leadoff homer but Jim Slaton walked Jim Nettles with two out in the bottom of the inning and Soderholm followed with his first homer of the season.

In the conclusion of the suspended game, which was halted by curfew after 21 innings Friday night, Ron Thoburn opened the 23d with a single, took second on a sacrifice and came home to score on Ferraro's hit off Carew's glove.

The Twins had runners on second and third with one out in the last of the 20th but Jim Lonborg got pinch-hitter Soderholm on a line to third and, after walking Cesar Tovar intentionally to load the bases, retired Danny Thompson on a forceout.

The 22-inning marathon, which took 5 hours, 47 minutes to complete, tied the American League record for the longest extra-inning night game at 22 innings.

On June 12, 1967, the Washington Senators beat the Chicago White Sox, 6-5, in 22 innings.

The last scoring on Friday night came in the seventh inning, when a two-run single by Tommy Reynolds pulled Milwaukee into a 3-3 tie.

Laver, Rosewall Gain Final
Of WCT in '71 Tennis Replay

By Mark Asher

DALLAS, May 14 (UPI)—At the end of his loss to Australia's Rod Laver in the semifinals of the World Championship of Tennis, Marty Riessen was like the punch-drunk boxer who would not go down. He was out on his feet, unaware of the surroundings.

Going into the match on Friday night, Riessen, of Evanston, Ill., held a 5-3 advantage in the past two years over the world's top player. And he played magnificently in winning the first two sets and gaining a double break point in the first game of the third.

Hopping on one Riessen mistake at this point and the fact Riessen had played a 2-hour, 46-minute five-setter the previous night while he rested, Laver won 13 of the next 21 games and advanced to the final, 4-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-0, before 7,000 at Moody Coliseum.

When defending champion Ken Rosewall, 27, returned Miami's Arthur Ashe's good serves almost impeccably, made only two volleying errors in the first two sets and scored a 6-4, 6-3, 7-6 victory in the second semifinal. It set up a replay of the 1971 final.

The winner makes $50,000, the biggest prize in tennis. The runner-up earns $20,000 of the $100,000 purse.

Rosewall of Australia won the third-set tie-breaker, 7-0, only the fourth shutout in 33 tie-breakers on the WCT circuit this season.

Laver was awarded the extra night's rest because he was seeded No. 1 on the basis of WCT points for the 20-tournament tour. Rosewall also received the extra day's rest as defending champion, in a format decided by WCT executive director Mike Davies.

"It's the most unfair thing that's been done," said Riessen. "We (the players) suggested a month ago that this shouldn't be done."

WCT spokesman said Riessen's argument "has real merit" and changes will be contemplated.

Rain Hails Final
BRUSSELS, May 14 (AP)—Manuel Orantes of Spain was leading, 6-4, 6-1, 2-6, over his compatriot Andres Gimeno in the final of the Belgium open tennis tournament when rain interrupted play. The match will be resumed tomorrow.

Gimeno defeated Harold Solomon of Silver Spring, Md., in yesterday's semifinals, 6-1, 9-7, 6-0, and Orantes ousted Barry Phillips-Moore of Australia, 6-2, 6-1, 5-7, 6-2.

Mays's Homer Nips Giants
In His First Game for Mets

NEW YORK, May 14 (UPI)—Willie Mays, greeted by a standing ovation in his first game appearance as a Met, repaid the tribute by hitting a game-winning homer in the fifth inning today to lead New York to a 5-4 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

The 41-year-old Mays, who started at first base and was put into the leadoff spot in the batting order by manager Yogi Berra, snapped a 4-4 tie with the 947th homer of his career as the leadoff batter in the fifth. The homer, which came on a 3-2 pitch off reliever Don Carrithers, was the 1,880th RBV of Mays's career and moved him into third place on the all-time National League list. Only Stan Musial and Henry Aaron top Mays in that department in the National League.

Mays, acquired by the Mets from the Giants last Thursday but kept out of action in the first two games of the series against his ex-clubmates, received a standing ovation from the Mother's Day crowd of 35,005 when he came to bat in the first inning. He started the Mets on the way to a four-run inning by drawing a walk off southpaw Sam McDowell.

Staub Hits Grand Slam
McDowell followed by walking Bud Harrelson and Tommie Agee to load the bases and Rusty Staub then cleared them by hitting a grand-slam homer off the scoreboard in right center field. It was Staub's third career grand slam and the latest ended an 0-for-16 slump for the Mets' outfielder.

Yankees 3, Angels 6
Mel Stottlemyre pitched a five-hitter to record the 31st shutout of his career as New York posted a 3-0 road victory over California.

Indians 3, Rangers 3
Alex Johnson's fourth homer of the season, a three-run shot, capped a six-run third inning that carried Cleveland to a 7-3 home victory over Texas.

Padres 5, Expos 6
In the National League, Nate Colbert capped a four-run eighth inning with his ninth home run of the season, tops in the major leagues in homers, and Fred Norman hurried a four-hit shutout as San Diego beat Montreal, at Jarry Park. It was the fourth loss in a row for the Expos.

Reds 11, Cardinals 2
Tony Perez hit a three-run homer in a five-run third inning as Cincinnati beat St. Louis, 11-2, at Cincinnati for Wayne Simpson's first victory of the season. Simpson, making his first start since his recall from an Indianapolis farm team a week ago, yielded one run and three hits before departing after six innings with a pulled muscle in his left leg. Pedro Borbon limited the Cards to one run over his last three innings to pick up his second save of the season.

Dodgers 3, Phillies 1
Claude Osteen helped his own cause with a run-scoring single in the fourth inning and, with ninth inning relief help from Jim Brewer, pitched Los Angeles to a 3-1 road victory over Philadelphia. It was Osteen's fourth victory in five decisions.

Pirates 6, Astros 1
Roberto Clemente's two-run triple and a run-scoring single by Al Oliver highlighted a five-run 12th inning and led Pittsburgh to a 6-1 road victory over Houston.

The Scoreboard
TENNES—At Tehran, Iran completed a 4-1 victory over Egypt in a European Cup tennis competition and retaining a stiff hand ride in the final turling.

Trainer Lucien Laurin said that Upper Case "never has run that way and I can't explain it. This horse has never run on the lead. As of now, though, I plan to run an entry in the Preakness."

Seagren Beats Isaksson in Rain; Ryun Fails
PHILADELPHIA, May 14 (UPI)—Olympic champion Bob Seagren beat world record-holder Kjell Isaksson of Sweden with a 17-foot, 6-inch pole vault and unseated Dave Wottle of Bowling Green won the mile in 3:58.5 seconds, a driving rain today as world record-holder Jim Ryun finished next to last, nearly 60 yards back in the third annual Martin Luther King Freedom Games at Franklin Field.

Seagren defeated Isaksson, who holds the record at 18-2, after clearing 17-8 as Isaksson missed.

Ray Sadecki protected the lead until the fifth when the Giants erupted for four runs to tie the score. Jim McAndrew took over for Sadecki in the sixth and blanked the Giants over the last four innings to preserve Sadecki's first victory of the season.

In his two other appearances at the plate, Mays struck out in the second and walked in the seventh, but was thrown out attempting to steal.

Yesterday, the Mets defeated the Giants, 1-0, while Mays watched from the bench.

In his place, the coddles were carried by a pair of Mets from the younger generation; Russ Capra, who pitched eight innings of three-hit ball, and Tug McGraw, who struck out the side in the ninth.

White Sox Defeat McNally, Sweep Orioles in 3 Games

NEW YORK, May 14 (UPI)—Tom Bradley hurled a six-hitter and the Chicago White Sox beat the Baltimore Orioles, 4-1, at Chicago to give the White Sox their first sweep of a three-game series over the Orioles since 1967.

Dave McNally, who had not lost to the White Sox since September, 1969, took his second loss of the season against four victories. McNally had won five straight over the White Sox.

It was the fourth victory in a row for Chicago and the seventh straight defeat on the road for Baltimore.

Rich Morales was the hitting star with a run-producing single in the second inning and his first homer of the year in the sixth. Bradley, who did not issue a walk and struck out seven, picked up his fourth victory of the year against one loss.

Twins 4, Brewers 2
Jim Kaat threw a six-hitter and hit a two-run homer to lead Minnesota to a 4-2 home victory over Milwaukee. The home run was the 13th in 14 major-league seasons for the 32-year-old Kaat, and the victory was his fourth this year against no defeats.

Indians 4, Rangers 3
Chris Chambliss, making his second appearance at the plate since being sidelined with a pulled hamstring muscle on April 17, hit a home run with one out in the 10th inning to give Cleveland a 4-3 home victory over Texas.

Gaylord Perry went all the way for the fourth time this season, picking up his sixth victory against two losses. The right-hander gave up six hits, struck out four and walked two in helping the Indians to their 10th victory in their last 12 games.

Tigers 3, Royals 2
Dick McAuliffe, who had walked three straight times, smashed a two-run homer in the eighth inning to give Detroit a 3-2 road victory over Kansas City in the first game of a doubleheader. The loss was Kansas City's fifth in a row.

Reds 4, Cards 3, 0
In the National League, Tony Perez celebrated his 30th birthday by hitting two home runs and driving in four runs to lead the Reds to a 4-3 victory over the Cardinals, 4-3, at Cincinnati.

Capra—a 24-year-old art student from Illinois State University—also batted home the run with a second-inning single off Mays's old teammate, Juan Marchal, who lost his sixth straight decision.

Manager Yogi Berra, who turned 47 Friday, was still suffering from a head cold—but not, he insisted yesterday, from any traumatic or emotional complications caused by the furor over Mays.

"While and I had a talk the other day, the day we got him," Yogi related. "I told him how we were going to use him—behind Tommie Agee in center and behind Ed Kranepool at first base. And he just said that was OK with him. We'll all be fine, as long as things calm down a bit."
